- Armed Forces of Iraq
- Geneva Prisoner of War convention (GPW) allows EPWs to be held until the "cessation of active hostilities or until the completion of trial and sentence if pending criminal proceedings for an indictable offense
- Most EPWs have been paroled but 18 are still being held based on intelligence interest or security threat
- May be subject to prosecution in Iraqi Special Tribunal (IST) after return of sovereignty

- Under Geneva Civilians Convention (GCC), Coalition may hold criminals while accused of offenses and after sentencing, until occupation ends
- Coalition responsible for oversight of the treatment of criminals until transition
- Detention of criminals is shifting to CPA civilian control as forces redeploy
- Saddam emptied prisons before war, so criminal detainees (along with Security Internees) held by Coalition comprise the majority of the current prison population
- CPA personnel are directing prison operations because previous regime was corrupt and abusive – need to rebuild corrections system (personnel and infrastructure)

- May be subject to prosecution in Iraqi Criminal Courts, including Central Criminal Court of Iraq (CCCI)

- Under GCC, Coalition may hold people for “imperative reasons of security”
  - Attacks on Coalition, terrorists, knowledge of WMD, senior regime leaders, foreign fighters
  - Authority as occupying power to hold Security Internees ends at the conclusion of the occupation
- High Value Detainees (HVD):
  - Basis depends on their status (EPW or Security Internee)
  - Held pursuant to Policy Guidance # 1 (Black List) & # 15 (Grey List)
- Prosecute in IST and CCCI

- Nearly 37,000 Iraqis have been detained by Coalition Forces since March 2003 — nearly two-thirds of them have been processed through to release or parole
  - Of approx. 18,000 criminal detainees processed, 2,606 remain in U.S. custody
  - Of approx. 11,000 security internees processed, 7,005 remain in custody
  - Of approx. 8,000 non-MEK EPWs—less than 50 remain (including HVDs).
- Bottom Line: The existing detainee process is working to ensure that individuals are screened and reviewed in an appropriate and timely fashion and released, when appropriate

- Recent adjustments dramatically improved processing capability
  - Initial reviewing magistrate can now order release
  - Standing review board increased review capacity to 100 cases/day
  - 857 cases reviewed as of 26 Feb by new review board
    - 710 ordered released
    - 65 recommended release unless further information is found to justify detention
    - 44 referred to CCCI for further investigation
    - 38 recommended for conditional release

- Bremer announced program on January 8, 2004
- Initial release of 59 detainees, more to follow
  - Must renounce violence
  - Guarantor (prominent community, religious, or tribal leader) must accept responsibility for future good conduct
- Not available for “those with blood-stained hands” (Bremer)

(b)(1)

- Detainee information is posted at police stations and elsewhere (including recently launched web-site)
- Limitations:
  - Language translation and database limitations (non-Arabic system)
  - Poor communication infrastructure in Iraq hampers more effective notification
  - Iraqis still dissatisfied with procedures

- Iraqi system operates in parallel to Coalition system
- Detainees can flow from Iraqi system to U.S. system as security internees and vice-versa (as categorization changes)
- Most common criminals are now arrested by Iraqi Police and processed through local Iraqi courts
- Virtually all Iraqi courts are operating, although not all court facilities operational

  - Crimes of special significance referred by Amb. Bremer
    - May include major crimes against Coalition Forces

- Three tiers
  - Investigative Judges
  - Trial Court: 3-Judge panel
  - Appellate Court—existing Iraqi Court of Cassation (highest court)

- CCCI applies Iraqi law, as modified by CPA orders
  - Death penalty has been suspended in Iraq

- CPA goal is to have CCCI trying 5 cases per week and conducting 10 investigations per week by March 10, 2004 (assumes requested investigative and security support is provided per Bremer's December 12, 2003, memo)

- UNSCR 1511 “authorizes a multinational force under unified command to take all necessary measures to contribute to the maintenance of security and stability in Iraq”
  - Arresting and detaining people in Iraq is therefore authorized to the extent they are necessary for the MNF to fulfill its mandate of contributing to international peace and security
  - Persons the MNF commander detains under this authority would be afforded protections analogous to Security Internees under the Geneva Civilians Conventions until handed over to Iraqi authorities
  - This argument may be controversial as some may not share this view on the continued authority and ability to use UNSCR 1511 in this manner

- EPWs and HVD Security Internees may continue to be held for prosecution.

- A security agreement and/or follow-on UNSCR would provide additional authorities for continued detainee operations
